CLARKSBURG MAN FACES JAIL TERM

Everett Hawk, Arrested Here, Then Released, In Hands of Washington Cops.

Everett Hawk, 23, who says he resides on the Roy Peck farm near Clarksburg, and who also says his father lives in this city, is in the hands of Fayette-co officials where he faces a charge of check forgery.

Hawk was apprehended here last week when he passed a bogus check on the Petitt Tire Co., but was released when no charge was filed against him.

"They said they hoped I'd go to the penitentiary, and now I hope I do. I want to go there because my wife said she never wanted to see my face again and hoped I would go to the penitentiary and stay."

Thus sobbed Washington C. H.'s latest check worker when held in city jail there.

"I wouldn't give a d—n if it wasn't for my two kids, but I should have gone clear out of the country and never let them see me again instead of getting into this scrape." He admitted being locked up in this city.

He was taken into custody in Washington C. H. after he had passed a check for $36.50 on Craig Bros. Saturday afternoon. He was located at the J. C. Penney store shortly afterward and taken into custody by the police. He still had the money he obtained from Craig's.

FIND CHECKS

In his possession were three or four checks, all drawn on banks in this city, and all made payable to Harold Smith and purporting to be signed by Jacob C. Jacobs.

One of the checks was for $34.20, another was for $26.60 and the third for $28.90.

He readily admitted passing the bad check, said he intended passing others and planned to throw the money to the winds just to get rid of it.

Hawk was in a Ford coupe which he said he purchased in Clarksburg and upon which he had made one payment.

He had torn part of the tire cover away to get rid of the name "Clarksburg."

Although he claimed he "wanted to go to the penitentiary," Hawk appeared very broken up over being arrested and held in jail. He said his wife wanted to get rid of him so that she could 'drive the car' and have a good time.

Dr. Stump Warns Of Co. Creeks

A warning to Circleville and Pickaway-co swimmers that the streams of the county, at very low levels, are nothing more than germ beds, was issued Monday by Dr. A. L. Stump, county health commissioner.

Dr. Stump says that the very clearest of the streams in which swimmers have been seeking relief from the intense heat are nothing more than a concentrated solution for bacteria and that the streams are infested with typhoid fever and germs of other descriptions which are very easily obtained by swimming in the county streams.

Dr. Stump states that at no time are the streams of the county fit to swim in because of the great abundance of germs and says that at this time they are worse than ever because they have received little or no rainfall.

Following is the statement Dr. Stump made concerning the swimming danger;

"The very low level of the streams of Pickaway-co at the present time creates an increased hazard for all who are tempted to resort to them in seeking relief from the excessive heat. They are probably not fit at any time for a swim, but at present, the very clearest is but a concentrated solution of bacteria. Your chances for typhoid fever and other intestinal troubles will be much improved by resorting to the streams for a bath.

FARMER, WIFE, YOUTH FOUND SLAUGHTERED

Murderer, Thought Maniac, Sets Fire to House, Trying To Hide Crime.

GENEVA, Ill., July 21—Neighbors entering the burning home of Charles A. Anderson, a wealthy farmer, today found that Anderson, his wife, and their 18-year-old son, William, had been hacked to death during the night, apparently the victims of a madman.

After slaying the three persons, the killer then set fire to the farmhouse and a nearby dwelling, in an effort to hide the crime. The fire, however, attracted the attention of neighbors and the Geneva Fire department reached the scene in time to save the building and reveal the triple murder.

Three men, including Charles Larson, 40, brother of Mrs. Anderson, broke into the farm house first and came upon the gruesome scene.

The father lay on his bed with deep wounds all over his body. The depth and shape of the wounds led police to believe they were inflicted by an axe or a hatchet.

SON LIVING

Similar cuts covered the body of the son, but he was still alive when the rescuers entered. He succumbed soon afterward, however.

Mrs. Anderson, 48, lay on the floor of the living room, her wrists and throat cut horribly. Beside the woman lay the death hatchet.

The mattresses on both the father and son's bed had been fired by the killer and the smoke pouring from them first aroused Larson.

As soon as the blaze was extinguished and the bodies were removed from the smouldering farmhouse, Sheriff L. L. Urch, of Kane County, opened an investigation. He ordered Larson held for questioning.

The fact that the family had no known enemies and the absence of any clues which might have suggested robbery as a motive led police to believe a maniac had performed the butchery. The Andersons were well known about the district and were respected by neighbors.

DEATH TAKES MRS. KIRWIN

Paralysis Attack Week Ago Proves Fatal to Highly Respected Resident.

Circleville lost one of its oldest and most respected residents Sunday when death came to Mrs Mary Ryan Kirwin at the home of her son, John M. Kirwin, 904 S Court-st.

Mrs. Kirwin was stricken with paralysis during the night of July 13 and survived the attack just one week, dying at 6 45 P M., Sunday evening, being in her ninety-first year.

Mary Ryan, the daughter of George Ryan and Mary Grady was born in the parish of Birdhill, Tipperary County, Ireland, March 26, 1839, and came with her parents to America in 1848, landing at Quebec in the Dominion of Canada.

She arrived in Circleville during the year 1854, and on February 5, 1855, was united in marriage with Patrick Kirwin, whom like herself, was a native of Tipperary County, Ireland. Eleven children came to bless this marriage, five of whom survive; Joseph P., of Marietta Ohio, John M., of this city, Patrick J., of Columbus, Daniel J. of Circleville, and Thomas J. Kirwin of Charleston, W. Va. Twenty grandchildren also mourn her loss.

The funeral services will be held at St Joseph's Catholic Church Wednesday, July 23, at 9 A M at which time the rector, Rt. Rev. Monsignor J S Hannan, will offer a High Requiem Mass for the repose of her soul. The burial will be made in St. Joseph's Catholic Cemetery. Her five sons and a nephew, Daniel Ryan, will carry her body to the grave.

Mrs Kirwin loved her religion and lived it as zealously and as unswervingly as is possible to our poor human nature. A faithful wife, an unselfish and devoted mother, the spirit of charity and self sacrifice guided her in all her social relations. A good neighbor, a friend to the poor and the unfortunate she dried the tears of the orphan and soothed the sorrows of the distressed. Truly all the days of her life she loved mercy, did justice and walked humbly with her God.

Many blessings came to her in the course of her long life, but she never ceased to thank Divine Providence for the grace of living to celebrate with her spouse the Golden Jubilee of her marriage anniversary, February 5 1905 as for the great favor of seeing the priesthood of the Catholic Church the services of her son, the late Monsignor James M. Kirwin who rose to great prominence in church and state.

An overwhelmingly sorrow was her portion when death called her husband Patrick Kirwin from her side, an event of November 10th 1906. May her soul rest in peace.

TYPHOON TOLL REACHES 400 THROUGH EAST

Thousands Missing, Property Damage Amounts To More Than 50 Millions.

TOKIO, July 21—More than 400 dead hundreds injured, over a thousand persons missing and property damage in excess of $50,000,000.

This, according to the latest check-up made today, was the frightful toll of disaster left in the wake of the violent typhoon which swept Southern Japan and Korea Friday.

With disrupted communication facilities gradually being restored, the extent of the desolation caused by the sudden storm began to be fully realized. Famine and disease may result in an even greater toll of death in the affected regions.

While Korea bore the brunt of the typhoon, one district of Japan proper, Kyushiu Island, was hard hit by the storm. A total of 62 persons lost their lives on Kyushiu, while scores were injured.

The death toll in Korea stood today at 349, with 210 seriously injured. A complete checkup of Korea's losses was still impossible, but the latest word stated that 1,386 persons living in the districts ravaged by the typhoon were unaccounted for.

Thousands of persons are homeless. Officials estimates say 40,000 houses were washed away and demolished or so badly flooded as to render them unfit for habitation. In addition, shops, schools and public buildings were destroyed when the typhoon swept in from the sea and left appalling desolation in its wake.

Agriculture communities were hard hit by the storm. Approximately 50,000 acres of rice land, producing the staple commodity for the surrounding district, were laid waste.

The typhoon, sweeping in from the Pacific, crossed the Loochoo Islands, Kyushiu Island and the inland sea and thence into Korea, where it spent its full fury. Torrential rains, accompanying the typhoon aggravated the suffering of the victims.

Tremendous damage was done in harbor ports, with approximately 750 vessels, including 125 in the harbor of Nagasaki alone, sunk or washed out to sea.

TEMPERATURE SUNDAY CLIMBS TO 109, MAY HIT 112 MARK TODAY

Rain Is Predicted But Not Until Late Tuesday, With Thunder Storm.

All records for intensive heat in Circleville were shattered Sunday when the official temperature reached was 109 degrees, registered on the government thermometer of Dr. Hartley R. Clarke. The greater amount of the heat came between the hours of 12 o'clock noon and 3 p. m. when the high point was reached. The temperature at noon Sunday was 98 degrees and three hours later had leaped 11 degrees.

The record set Sunday appeared destined to be broken Monday when the official mark at noon was 101 degrees, three more than it was at this time Sunday. If the mercury continues to mount higher, it is expected the high mark today will reach 112 by 3 o'clock.

Dr. Clarke would not believe his eyes when he consulted the thermometer Sunday and called T. F. Jeffries, a local merchant, who confirmed the mark.

104 PREVIOUSLY

The previous high mark, as far as Dr. Clarke can ascertain was 104 in this city.

Clouds appeared intermittently during the period around Monday noon and although weather forcasters for days have predicting rain, it is thought by many, that like the river, this terrific hot weather will go on forever.

The Pickaway-co farm bureau reports that unless a hard rain begins to fall soon, the corn crop will be practically a failure. The corn is drying up and at best a half crop can be hoped for.

The report from the U. S. weather bureau in Columbus states that "partly cloudy tonight and Tuesday with scattered thundershowers. Not so warm in north portion tonight. Cooler Tuesday and Tuesday night."

By International News Service

The perspiring nation anxiously scanned the skies for thunder clouds today, praying for relief from the most intense and general heat wave of the summer.

MANY DEATHS

Scores of deaths and prostrations were reported following continued record-breaking temperatures which prevailed throughout the United States yesterday.

Moderate conditions were recorded only in the Rocky Mountain region and sections of the Pacific Coast. Rain brought some relief to central Minnesota, Wisconsin, and a few other localities.

The back of the heat wave probably will be broken by tomorrow, according to official forecasters.

Leading the country in the number of deaths attributed to the heat this year, St. Louis' total was swelled to 108 when two persons succumbed yesterday, according to International News Service. There also were six drownings in the St. Louis district.

In Chicago four were dead from sunstroke and nine from drowning after a temperature of 99. Eight died from the heat and ten from drowning in New York. Two died in Milwaukee, two at Detroit and one in Kansas City. Prostrations were numerous.

Indiana is experiencing the greatest drought since 1901. Six deaths by drowning were reported in the state. The mercury climbed to the 100 mark at Indianapolis.

Three heat victims and ten drowning was the toll in Ohio. Pennsylvania's toll stood at 19 for the weekend, and a new high temperature of 104 was recorded in the central portion of the state. MORE

No relief from the scorching temperatures which have gripped Ohio for the past four days was predicted by weather bureau officials today as reports of drownings and deaths from heat prostration continued to be received by International News Service.

At least 17 persons were drowned in Ohio's lakes and streams over the week-end and an undetermined toll of heat deaths was taken throughout the state on the Sabbath. Four other deaths are known to have been covered by the heat.

Columbus was the hot spot in the United States yesterday with an unofficial mark of 112 degrees recorded. The government thermometer there registered 101 degrees. It was the highest mark which has been recorded for 15 years. The mercury soared to record-breaking marks in nearly every city and village of the State.

SEE NO RELIEF

Although no relief was predicted today, the weatherman forecasted scattered thunder showers tonight and slightly cooler weather for Tuesday. The expected showers are not expected to bring much cooler weather, however.

Extensive damage was done to Ohio crops and property over the week-end by the continued drought and by fires, many of which were directly attributed to the heat. Losses which are expected to total several hundred thousand dollars were caused by fires.

Several field fires which were reported in southern Ohio had not been brought under control today. Firemen in many Ohio towns and villages were hampered in fighting blazes because of water shortages.

Officials of most cities have issued warnings to their districts that the water supplies are rapidly becoming exhausted. Residents are being urged to use water sparingly.

HORSES DIE

Thirteen horses, which were owned by a Columbus milk company, were burned to death Saturday night in a fire which swept the company stables.

Clinton Stauffer, 58, of Columbus, died from heart disease which was aggravated by the heat, according to physicians.

Ernest F. Blease, Jr., 18, of Lakewood, collapsed in a drug store due to the heat and died a short time later in a hospital.

Byron Buchman, 54, who lived on a farm near Fremont, became crazed with the heat and jumped into a tank of crude oil and was drowned.

A new all-time mark of 106.25 degrees was officially recorded at Bowling Green yesterday. A mark of 104 degrees was registered in 1894. Three Ohio cities, Martin's Ferry, Hamilton and Lancaster, also reported 106 degrees.

MAN BLINDED

One man was blinded by the heat at Toledo where the mercury reached 102.4 degrees for the highest mark since the weather bureau was established there in 1871. A heat-crazed dog ran wild in Toledo bit two small children and threatened several others before it was killed by police.

Scores of other Ohio towns and villages sweltered under record-breaking temperatures which in most cases, exceeded the 100-degree mark. Springfield had an official reading of 104 degrees and Dayton reported 103.

'Tis The Heat

Traffic at Main and Court became congested Monday morning, when a driver having the green light in his favor, failed to notice, or give a continental that green meant go. By the time he got around to it, he was stopped by the red light.

A cat chased a rat down Main-st Sunday, and they were both walking.

No traffic accidents were reported, probably due to the slow rate of speed, due to the heat.

At the garage of the Albaugh Undertaking establishment, a substantial garage door was smashed when the driver of one of the Albaugh cars, tried to back out, without opening the doors.

Persons who have worn glasses for years were almost unrecognizable Sunday as they went about without them. The glasses refused to stay on any kind of noses, turned up or Roman-shaped.

SON LIVING

Similar cuts covered the body of the son, but he was still alive when the rescuers entered. He succumbed soon afterward, however.

Mrs. Anderson, 48, lay on the floor of the living room, her wrists and throat cut horribly. Beside the woman lay the death hatchet.

The mattresses on both the father and son's bed had been fired by the killer and the smoke pouring from them first arroused Larson.

As soon as the blaze was extinguished and the bodies were removed from the smouldering farmhouse, Sheriff L. L. Urch, of Kane County, opened an investigation. He ordered Larson held for questioning.

The fact that the family had no known enemies and the absence of any clues which might have suggested robbery as a motive led police to believe a maniac had performed the butchery. The Andersons were well known about the district and were respected by neighbors.

DEATH TAKES MRS. KIRWIN

Circleville lost one of its oldest and most respected residents Sunday when death came to Mrs. Mary Ryan Kirwin at the home of her son, John M. Kirwin, 904 S. Court-st.

Mrs. Kirwin was stricken with paralysis during the night of July 13 and survived the attack just one week, dying at 6:45 P. M., Sunday evening, being in her ninety-first year.

Mary Ryan, the daughter of George Ryan and Mary Grady was born in the parish of Birdhill, Tipperary County, Ireland, March 26, 1839, and came with her parents to America in 1848, landing at Quebec in the Dominion of Canada.

She arrived in Circleville during the year 1854, and on February 5, 1855, was united in marriage with Patrick Kirwin, whom like herself, was a native of Tipperary County, Ireland. Eleven children came to bless this marriage, five of whom survive; Joseph P., of Marietta, Ohio, John M., of this city, Patrick J., of Columbus, Daniel J. of Circleville, and Thomas J. Kirwin of Charleston, W. Va. Twenty grandchildren also mourn her loss.

The funeral services will be held at St. Joseph's Catholic Church, Wednesday, July 23, at 9 A. M., at which time the rector, Rt. Rev. Monsignor J. S. Hannan, will offer a High Requiem Mass for the repose of her soul. The burial will be made in St. Joseph's Catholic Cemetery. Her five sons and a nephew, Daniel Ryan, will carry her body to the grave.

Mrs. Kirwin loved her religion, and lived it as zealously and as unswervingly as is possible to our poor human nature. A faithful wife, an unselfish and devoted mother, the spirit of charity and self sacrifice guided her in all her social relations. A good neighbor, a friend to the poor and the unfortunate, she dried the tears of the orphan and soothed the sorrows of the distressed. Truly, all the days of her life, she loved mercy, did justice, and walked humbly with her God.

Many blessings came to her in the course of her long life, but she never ceased to thank Divine Providence for the grace of living to celebrate with her spouse the Golden Jubilee of her marriage anniversary, February 5, 1905, and for the great favor of giving to the priesthood of the Catholic Church the services of her son, the late Monsignor James M. Kirwin, who rose to great prominence in church and state.

An overwhelmingly sorrow was her portion when death called her husband, Patrick Kirwin, from her side, an event of November 10th, 1906. May her soul rest in peace.

TYPHOON TOLL REACHES 400 THROUGH EAST

Thousands Missing, Property Damage Amounts To More Than 50 Millions.

TOKIO, July 21—More than 400 dead, hundreds injured, over a thousand persons missing and property damage in excess of $50,000,000.

This, according to the latest check-up made today, was the frightful toll of disaster left in the wake of the violent typhoon which swept Southern Japan and Korea Friday.

With disrupted communication facilities gradually being restored, the extent of the desolation caused by the sudden storm began to be fully realized. Famine and disease may result in an even greater toll of death in the affected regions.

While Korea bore the brunt of the typhoon, one district of Japan proper, Kyushiu Island, was hard hit by the storm. A total of 62 persons lost their lives on Kyushiu, while scores were injured.

The death toli in Korea stood today at 349, with 210 seriously injured. A complete checkup of Korea's losses was still impossible, but the latest word stated that 1,386 persons living in the districts ravaged by the typhoon were unaccounted for.

Thousands of persons are homeless. Officials estimates say 40,000 houses were washed away and demolished or so badly flooded as to render them unfit for habitation. In addition, shops, schools and public buildings were destroyed when the typhoon swept in from the sea and left appalling desolation in its wake.

Agriculture communtites were hard hit by the storm. Approximately 50,000 acres of rice land, producing the staple commodity for the surrounding district, were laid waste.

The typhoon, sweeping in from the Pacific, crossed the Loochoo Islands, Kyushiu Island and the inland sea and thence into Korea, where it spent its full fury. Torrential rains, accompanying the typhoon aggravated the suffering of the victims.

Tremendous damage was done in harbor ports. with approximately 750 vessels, including 125 in the harbor of Nagasaki alone, sunk or washed out to sea.

The Japanese and Korean governments are rushing relief measures.

TEMPERATURE SUNDAY CLIMBS TO 109, MAY HIT 112 MARK TODAY

Rain Is Predicted But Not Until Late Tuesday, With Thunder Storm.

All records for intensive heat in Circleville were shattered Sunday when the official temperature reached was 109 degrees, registered on the government thermometer of Dr. Hartley R. Clarke. The greater amount of the heat came between the hours of 12 o'clock noon and 3 p. m. when the high point was reached. The temperature at noon Sunday was 98 degrees and three hours later had leaped 11 degrees.

The record set Sunday appeared destined to be broken Monday when the official mark at noon was 101 degrees, three more than it was at this time Sunday. If the mercury continues to mount higher, it is expected the high mark today will reach 112 by 3 o'clock.

Dr. Clarke would not believe his eyes when he consulted the thermometer Sunday and called T. F. Jeffries, a local merchant, who confirmed the mark.

104 PREVIOUSLY

The previous high mark, as far as Dr. Clarke can ascertain was 104 in this city.

Clouds appeared intermittently during the period around Monday noon and although weather forcasters for days have predicting rain, it is thought by many, that like the river, this terrific hot weather will go on forever.

The Pickaway-co farm bureau reports that unless a hard rain begins to fall soon, the corn crop will be practically a failure. The corn is drying up and at best a half crop can be hoped for.

The report from the U. S. weather bureau in Columbus states that "partly cloudy tonight and Tuesday with scattered thundershowers. Not so warm in north portion tonight. Cooler Tuesday and Tuesday night."

By International News Service

The perspiring nation anxiously scanned the skies for thunder clouds today, praying for relief from the most intense and general heat wave of the summer.

MANY DEATHS

Scores of deaths and prostrations were reported following continued record-breaking temperatures which prevailed throughout the United States yesterday.

Moderate conditions were recorded only in the Rocky Mountain region and sections of the Pacific Coast. Rain brought some relief to central Minnesota, Wisconsin, and a few other localities.

The back of the heat wave probably will be broken by tomorrow, according to official forecasters.

Leading the country in the number of deaths attributed to the heat this year, St. Louis' total was swelled to 108 when two persons succumbed yesterday, according to International News Service. There also were six drownings in the St. Louis district.

In Chicago four were dead from sunstroke and nine from drowning after a temperature of 99. Eight died from the heat and ten from drowning in New York. Two died in Milwaukee, two at Detroit and one in Kansas City. Prostrations were numerous.

Indiana is experiencing the greatest drought since 1901. Six deaths by drowning were reported in the state. The mercury climbed to the 100 mark at Indianapolis.

Three heat victims and ten drowning was the toll in Ohio. Pennsylvania's toll stood at 19 for the weekend, and a new high temperature of 104 was recorded in the central portion of the state.

MORE

No relief from the scorching temperatures which have gripped Ohio for the past four days was predicted by weather bureau officials today as reports of drownings and deaths from heat prostration continued to be received by International News Service.

At least 17 persons were drowned in Ohio's lakes and streams over the week-end and an unestimated toll of heat deaths was taken throughout the state on the Sabbath. Four other deaths are known to have been covered by the heat.

Columbus was the hot spot of the United States yesterday with an unofficial mark of 112 degrees recorded. The government thermometer there registered 101 degrees. It was the highest mark which has been recorded for 12 years. The mercury soared to record-breaking marks in nearly every city and village of the State.

SEE NO RELIEF

Although no relief was predicted today, the weatherman forecasted scattered thunder showers tonight and slightly cooler weather for Tuesday. The expected showers are not expected to bring much cooler weather, however.

Extensive damage was done to Ohio crops and property over the week-end by the continued drought and by fires, many of which were directly attributed to the heat. Losses which are expected to total several hundred thousand dollars were caused by fires.

Several field fires which were reported in southern Ohio had not been brought under control today. Firemen in many Ohio towns and villages were hampered in fighting blazes because of water shortages.

Officials of most cities have issued warnings to their districts that the water supplies are rapidly becoming exhausted. Residents are being urged to use water sparingly.

HORSES DIE

Thirteen horses, which were owned by a Columbus milk company, were burned to death Saturday night in a fire which swept the company stables.

Clinton Stauffer, 58, of Columbus, died from heart disease which was aggravated by the heat, according to physicians.

Ernest F. Blease, Jr., 18, of Lakewood, collapsed in a drug store due to the heat and died a short time later in a hospital.

Byron Buchman, 54, who lived on a farm near Fremont, became crazed with the heat and jumped into a tank of crude oil and was drowned.

A new all-time mark of 106.25 degrees was officially recorded at Bowling Green yesterday. A mark of 104 degrees was registered in 1894. Three Ohio cities, Martin's Ferry, Hamilton and Lancaster, also reported 106 degrees.

MAN BLINDED

One man was blinded by the heat at Toledo, where the mercury reached 102.4 degrees for the highest mark since the weather bureau was established there in 1871. A heat-crazed dog ran wild in Toledo, bit two small children, and threatened several others before it was killed by police.

Scores of other Ohio towns and villages sweltered under record-breaking temperatures, which, in most cases, exceeded the 100-degree mark. Springfield had an official reading of 104 degrees and Dayton reported 103.

DATES FOR HEALTH CLINIC ARE NEAR

Diagnostic Meetings To Be Held at Williamsport and Ashville, Aug. 5-6.

Health Commissioner A. L. Stump announces that dioagnostic health clinic in Pickaway-co will be held Tuesday, August 5, in Williamsport, and August 6, in Ashville, with Dr. Senteff of Mt. Logan Sanatorium and Dr. Thomas of Clark County Sanitorium diagnosticians. These physicians have devoted years of study and practice on diseases of the chest and are recognized authorities on tuberculosis.

Physicians are informed by the organization nurses and by a letter from the County Commissioner of Health that in every instance patients attending these clinics will be referred back to their own physicians, and that no information as to the diagnosis will be given at the clinic. Copies of the diagnostician's findings and recommendations are furnished the patient's physician as soon as the clinic is closed. Physicians are invited to attend these clinics and to be present while their own patients are being examined.

The diagnosticians try to make fifteen examinations a day and this means that in the average clinic approximately 30 patients are examined. The patients are examined and classified as positives, suspects and negatives. The suspects are those cases in which it is not possible to make a definite diagnosis of the disease nor to rule out certain symptoms which seems to demand further observation and examination. These suspect cases are referred back to the family physician for further observation and for use of the various accessories to diagnosis as temperature charts, X-rays, etc.

It will be impossible to examine all the suspected cases in the county at these clinics, so it will be necessary for every person desiring this service to have their physician call the local health commissioner for an appointment.

Recalls Wine Bath Party That Ended in Atlanta

In a rather meditative mood is Earl Carroll, the noted producer, as he listens to the pros and cons concerning his latest artistic endeavor, "The Vanities." Perhaps Earl is thinking of the court room days two years or so ago when Uncle Sam successfully prosecuted him on perjury charges, an outgrowth of a wine bath party.

Use More Water Here Saturday Than On Sunday

As far as water drinking was concerned the residents of Circleville seemed to be much dryer Saturday, than on Sunday as according to H. B. Denman, superintendent of the Ohio Water Service Co., there were about 184,000 more gallons consumed Saturday than there was Sunday.

This can probably be attributed to the fact that many of the public drinking fountains were not giving their flow of water Sunday.

Records at the waterworks show that 670,650 gallons of water consumed Saturday and only 586,190 gallons used Sunday.

According to Mr. Denman the water supply in Circleville is in the best of condition and he states that the supply looks much better today than it did last week.

Although Darby creek is lower than it has ever been known to be nevertheless because it is made up almost wholly of wells allows it to substantiate the water supply.

Screen Test

Then there is the absent-minded professor who started to put up his screens and found out he didn't take them down last fall.

The Boy who HATED COLD

Has Been at BOTH POLES

THE BOY WHO HATED COLD determined to be a polar explorer when he was only 11 years old.

At 14, he was in the Philippines, beginning a career of adventure that puts imagination to shame.

He encountered physical and financial handicaps.

He battled a jinx that followed him throughout his early career.

He faced death many times in the pursuit of his ambition.

Now for the first time, the story of Richard E. Byrd,—he was the boy who hated cold—is available to newspaper readers, including the events of 1930.

It's the story of a man's man.

18 AIRPLANES ON AIR DERBY

Moth-like Ships To Cover 6,000 Miles Across Country After Prizes.

DETROIT, July 21.—Eighteen moth-like planes, flown by 18 of the wiriest pilots in aviation, disappeared into a blistering sun this morning from municipal airport here on the start of the All-American flying derby, which will take them 6,000 miles around the continent.

A surprisingly large crowd witnessed the getaway. More than 3,000 persons, who began trickling through the airport gates as early as 6 o'clock this morning, saw the almost wierd collection of planes take to the air.

The first stop of the flight is Buffalo and at about 4 o'clock this afternoon all are expected to land at Roosevelt Field, N. Y.

From New York, the contestants will leave for Little Rock, Houston, San Angelo, Douglas, Los Angeles, Ogden, Lincoln, Neb., Chicago and then back to Detroit where the race will officially end.

Prizes of $40,000, including a grand prize of $25,000, have been offered.

Leach and others had been working on a boxcar door which had become jammed, and a piece of timber was being used as a lever, one end being placed against the door and the other end being used against the tractor.

KONJOLA ENDS SIX YEARS OF AWFUL AGONIES

Read This Case Wherein New and Different Medicine Scored Its Usual Victory.

MRS. FRANCES DEARWESTER

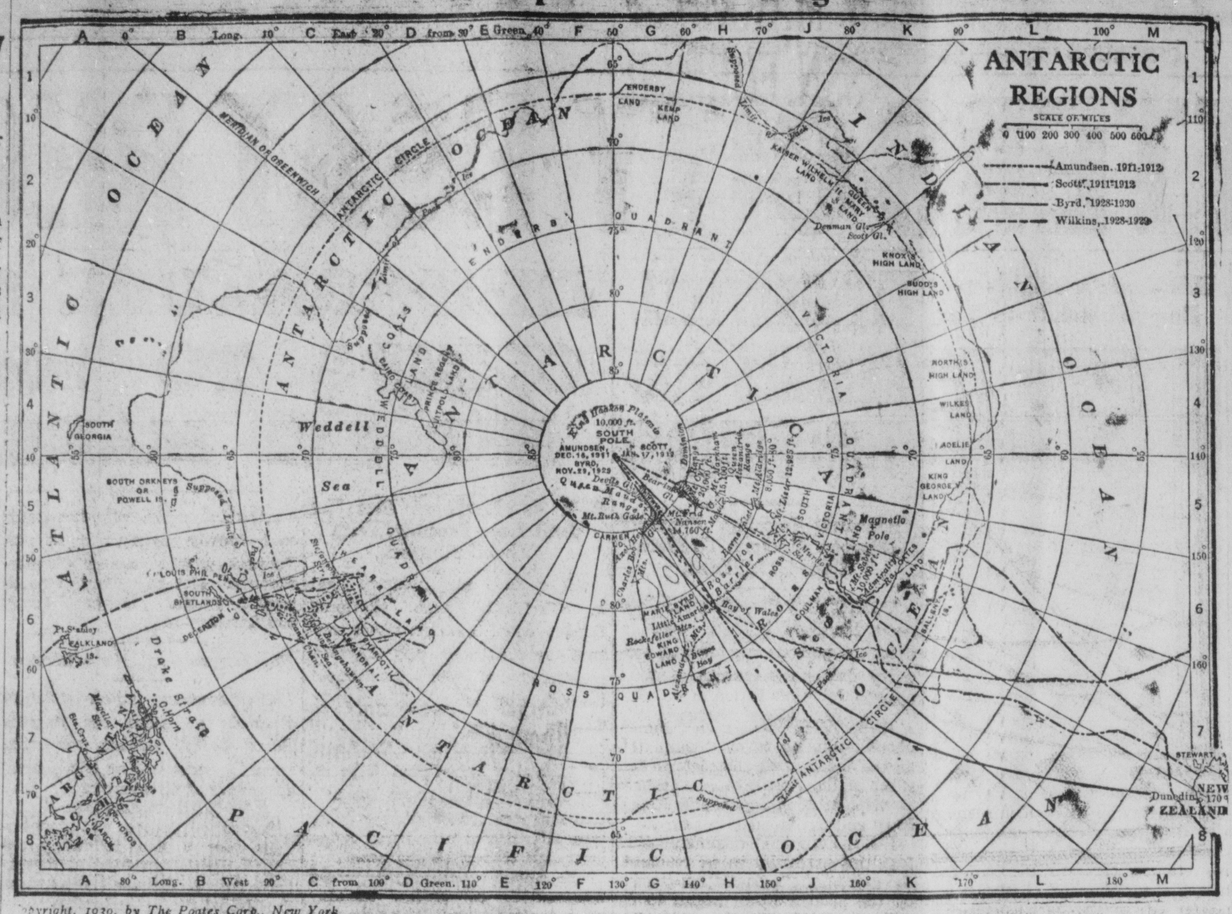

Konjola, actually 32 medicines blended into one, is a household word wherever Konjola is known, for just one reason — Konjola makes good even though all else tried has failed. But read of an actual experience; read the words of Mrs. Frances Dearwester, 221 Erkenbrecker avenue, Cincinnati, who declares:

"For six years I had rheumatism in my right hip, and for three months was unable to work. The bottoms of my feet burned like fire, and my joints would crack. I had indigestion, and kidney trouble made me get up several times every night. Five bottles of Konjola made new health possible and my nerves are calm, I enjoy my work and I feel like I am in an entirely different world. I eat all I like, and my joints are flexible again. Never can I praise Konjola enough."

Konjola contains no alcohol, no nerve-deadening drugs, no heart-depressing chemicals. It needs no such ingredients its seeming wonders to perform.

THE LATEST CHART OF THE ANTARCTIC REGIONS

Exploring regions before unknown, unseen by man, and above all exploring these desolate wastes in the interest of man by airplane, is depicted in "Rear Admiral Byrd and the Polar Expeditions," written by Coram Foster, which starts in this newspaper in Wednesday's issue.

KINGSTON

Amateur night was a very popular night at the Pawnee Comedy Co. on Thursday evening where a few of Kingston's talented young folks performed for prizes given by the show company. Ada Thornton won the first prize of $2 with her jig dancing; Bobby Carmean, acrobat and Jessie Anne Mowery, buck dancing, tied for second prize of $1, the applause for each one deciding who was to be the winner and by a close margin Bobbie Carmean won; Irene Kelley and Betty Evans delighted the audience with piano solos; Martha Jane Bond, Betty Carmean, Mary Ann Dreisbach and Donald Buchwalter did clog dancing; George Thomas sang the song, "On the Road to Mandalay," the song that won him first place for the county and second for the state. 18 AIRPLANES ON AIR DERBY

Moth-like Ships To Cover 6,000 Miles Across Country After Prizes.

DETROIT, July 21.—Eighteen moth-like planes, flown by 18 of the wiliest pilots in aviation, disappeared into a blistering sun this morning from municipal airport here on the start of the All-American flying derby, which will take them 6,000 miles around the continent.

A surprisingly large crowd witnessed the getaway More than 3,000 persons, who began trickling through the airport gates as early as 6 o'clock this morning, saw the almost wierd collection of planes take to the air.

The first stop of the flight is Buffalo and at about 4 o'clock this afternoon all are expected to land at Roosevelt Field N Y

From New York, the contestants will leave for Little Rock, Houston, San Angelo, Douglas, Los Angeles, Ogden, Lincoln, Neb., Chicago and then back to Detroit where the race will officially end.

Prizes of $40,000, including a grand prize of $25,000, have been offered.

VILLAGE MAN HURT IN FALL

Grant Leach, well known resident of Bloomingburg, Fayette-co, is recovering from injuries he received last week when he was caught between a tractor and the side of a boxcar and rolled along for several yards before the tractor could be stopped.

Leach and others had been working on a boxcar door which had become jammed, and a piece of timber was being used as a lever, one end being placed against the door and the other end being used against the tractor.

KONJOLA ENDS SIX YEARS OF AWFUL AGONIES

Read This Case Wherein New and Different Medicine Scored Its Usual Victory.

MRS. FRANCES DEARWESTER

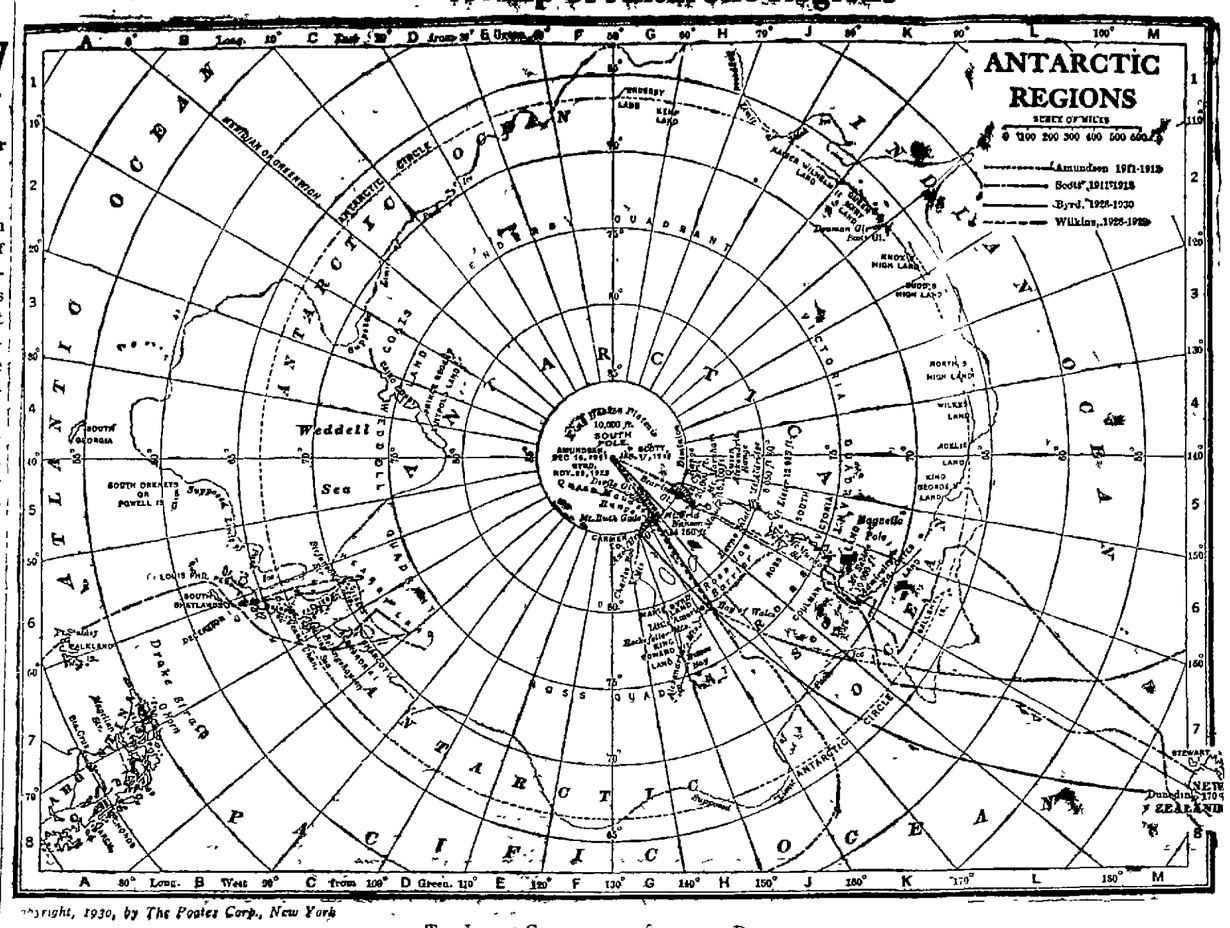

Konjola, actually 32 medicines blended into one, is a household word wherever Konjola is known for just one reason — Konjola makes good even though all else tried has failed But read of an actual experience; read the words of Mrs Frances Dearwester, 221 Erkenbrecker avenue, Cincinnati, who declares

"For six years I had rheumatism in my right hip and for three months was unable to work The bottoms of my feet burned like fire and my joints would crack I had indigestion and kidney trouble made me get up several times every night. Five bottles of Konjola made new health possible and my nerves are calm I enjoy my work and I feel like I am in an entirely different world I eat all I like, and my joints are flexible again Never can I praise Konjola enough!

Konjola contains no alcohol no nerve-racking drugs no heart-depressing chemicals It needs no such ingredients its seeming wonders to perform

Exploring regions before unknown, unseen by man, and above all exploring these desolate wastes in the interest of man by airplane, is depicted in "Rear Admiral Byrd and the Polar Expeditions," written by Coram Foster, which starts in this newspaper in Wednesday's issue.

DATES FOR HEALTH CLINIC ARE NEAR

Health Commissioner A. L. Stump announces that dioagnostic health clinic in Pickaway-co will be held Tuesday, August 5, in Williamsport, and August 6, in Ashville, with Dr. Senteff of Mt. Logan Sanatorium and Dr. Thomas of Clark County Sanitorium diagnosticians. These physicians have devoted years of study and practice on diseases of the chest and are recognized authorities on tuberculosis.

Physicians are informed by the organization nurses and by a letter from the County Commissioner of Health that in every instance patients attending these clinics will be referred back to their own physicians, and that no information as to the diagnosis will be given at the clinic. Copies of the diagnostician's findings and recommendations are furnished the patient's physician as soon as the clinic is closed. Physicians are invited to attend these clinics and to be present while their own patients are being examined.

The diagnosticians try to make fifteen examinations a day and this means that in the average clinic approximately 30 patients are examined. The patients are examined and classified as positives, suspects and negatives. The suspects are those cases in which it is not possible to make a definite diagnosis of the disease nor to rule out certain symptoms which seems to demand further observation and examination. These suspect cases are referred back to the family physician for further observation and for use of the various accessories to diagnosis as temperature charts, X-rays, etc.

It will be impossible to examine all the suspected cases in the county at these clinics, so it will be necessary for every person desiring this service to have their physician call the local health commissioner for an appointment.

Recalls Wine Bath Party That Ended in Atlanta

In a rather meditative mood is Earl Carroll, the noted producer, as he listens to the pros and cons concerning his latest artistic endeavor, "The Vanities." Perhaps Earl is thinking of the court room days two years or so ago when Uncle Sam successfully prosecuted him on perjury charges, an outgrowth of a wine bath party.

Use More Water Here Saturday Than On Sunday

As far as water drinking was concerned the residents of Circleville seemed to be much dryer Saturday, than on Sunday as according to H. B. Denman, superintendent of the Ohio Water Service Co., there were about 184,000 more gallons consumed Saturday than there was Sunday.

This can probably be attributed to the fact that many of the public drinking fountains were not giving their flow of water Sunday.

Records at the waterworks show that 670,650 gallons of water consumed Saturday and only 536,190 gallons used Sunday.

According to Mr. Denman the water supply in Circleville is in the best of condition and he states that the supply looks much better today than it did last week.

Although Darby creek is lower than it has ever been known to be nevertheless because it is made up almost wholly of wells allows it to substantiate the water supply.

Screen Test

Then there is the absent-minded professor who started to put up his screens and found out he didn't take them down last fall.

ST. LOUIS PAIR AFTER RECORD

Jackson and O'Brine Set Out To Retake Refueling Endurance Mark.

LAMBERT ST. LOUIS FLYING Field, July 21—Dale "Red" Jackson and Forrest O'Brine took to the clouds this morning at 7:11 a. m. in their Curtiss-Robin monoplane "Greater St. Louis" in an effort to recapture the endurance flying record taken from them recently by the Hunter brothers of Sparta, Ill.

The mark set by the St. Louis flyers last summer was 420 hours while the present record is 553 hours.

The "Greater St. Louis" was a gift to the endurance flyers from the Curtiss-Robertson Manufacturing Company after they had set their world record last year.

Rheumatism Pains
Stop in 7 to 10 Minutes

I have suffered from neuritis in my arms for 2 years and could not sleep at night on account of the pain. The medicine prescribed by the doctor brought me no relief. My sister told me about MUSCLETONE as it had helped her so I sent for a bottle and after a few applications, the pains in my arms are entirely gone. I am still using MUSCLETONE for a pain in my back and am getting splendid results. Mrs. Minnie Fitzgerald, 426 N. Walnut St., Bucyrus, Ohio.

After using a trial treatment of MUSCLETONE, I purchased a large bottle from my druggist and used it for severe pain in my hip and found marvelous relief, immediately. I have also used it for neuritis in my wrists and was relieved of that very quickly. I cheerfully recommend MUSCLETONE. Charles E. Wolf, 365 W. Second St., Columbus, Ohio.

When a man has rheumatism so badly that it is downright agony to even move and suddenly regains complete freedom from pain—the chances are that he has learned the secret of MUSCLETONE.

Almost a million people now have found relief through this new discovery. So far as the painful part of rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, neuralgia, lameness of muscle, bones and joints is concerned you may forget it with the first application. Relief actually comes in 7 to 10 minutes. Chronic cases and those unusually severe will of course require continued treatment for a while but isn't it wonderful that the relief you seek is now so easily obtained?

MUSCLETONE is a new discovery in medical science. You no longer dose the system with violent or nauseating drugs. The treatment is applied directly to the part affected and neutralizes accumulated toxins. You can almost feel the pain leaving.

We urge only that you make this test. MUSCLETONE is now obtainable at any good drug store. Buy it today. Use one half the bottle and if you are not entirely satisfied return the remaining half to the druggist and he will refund your money. The price is $1.00.

PORCUPINES

We know a family that has a cabin in the north woods. They have a porcupine—or the porcupine has them, they're not quite sure which. He gnaws at anything handy, can be driven temporarily by a flashlight, but returns, always undaunted, to gnaw some more.

Of late he has evinced fondness for a certain brand of soap warranted to preserve the schoolgirl complexion. He will eat ivory or castile, he will even eat naphtha soap if nothing better offers, but he prefers the sweet smelling green when he has a choice.

The cabin is not very large. Ablutions are performed at a bench outside the house which holds a pail, dipper and basin. Towels hang on nails, and a starch-box nailed to the wall holds the soap and toothpaste. Porky has not yet learned how to open the toothpaste tubes, but when he does, the family will probably have to build on a lean-to for washing, and civilization will have wormed its way in.

The porcupine is protected in Ontario, and anyhow, why should they harm him? He was there first and doubtless regards the family as interlopers. He's an entertaining cuss, waddling off in the glare of a flashlight with all his quills standing out like an aura in the glow.

But when he gnaws the washboard or the handle of a tub he makes a good deal of noise. Has anyone any advice to offer on the subject of soap-eating porcupines?

POLITICS BY RADIO

Detroit is having a merry time with its radio politics. Robert Oakman denounces in good, round, old-fashioned terms the "betrayal of the public trust" of which he says Mayor Charles Bowles is guilty. Oakman spent several thousands of dollars, it is said, to help along Bowles' campaign last fall, because he thought he would make a good mayor. Believing Bowles unfaithful to what was expected of him, Oakman now spends more thousands trying to undo his past mistake.

Bowles, on the other hand, declares that he's saved the city thousands of dollars, and defends his policy. It's a whopping row.

The radio is giving people a chance at the personal appeal of the old-time campaigns. Words on paper are never quite the same as the voice resounding in the ears.

Radio listeners get a chance to know that Herbert Hoover says "govermunt" and Cal Coolidge talks through his nose. But if the idols prove themselves to have feet of clay, they at least prove themselves human and deserving of the best human judgment as their merits and their capabilities for public service.

Maybe what the public has been needing in these last apathetic years is a good old hullabaloo that stirs 'em all up and gets everybody to using his bean.

BEATING DEPRESSIONS

It's a great year for some folks.

The "tobacco trust" reports the most prosperous year in its history. It's at the top notch right now, in midsummer.

Maybe this is on account of the vacation season. People on vacation always smoke more. It might be attributed, too, to unemployment. Forced idleness makes tobacco an essential. People have to indulge in small luxuries to make poverty endurable.

One of the big tobacco men, though, says it's newspaper advertising that does it. That put over cigarettes in a big way, and now seems to be doing the same thing for cigars, which were crowded out for a while.

If that's the real reason—and it must be a big factor—it might serve as a fruitful suggestion to some other lines of business.

PUNISHMENT

It is rather startling to hear Newton D. Baker, former secretary of war, a leading member of the American bar and a member of the President's crime commission, suggesting that criminal terms be reduced 80 percent. Referring to penal conditions in his own state, he says:

"Instead of sending some one to the penitentiary for 10 years you sent him for two years for the same offense, but when he was sent for two years he stayed the two years, it would be far better than to send him for 10 and let him out at the end of five or three or even two years."

The principle that he is trying to drive home is sound. All experience seems to prove that light punishment which are certain are more effective in preventing crime than heavy punishments which are uncertain.

LIFE'S LIKE THAT

"WHERE'S EMILY?"

by CAROLYN WELLS

CHAPTER XXXIV.

"HOW do you know he had black hair?" demanded Pete, "didn't he have his hat on?"

"He told me so," said Larry, his mouth full of cake.

"Told you he had black hair?"

"Naw, I don't mean that, I mean he told me to bring the note here."

"Your supper has gone to your head," said Pete, laughing at the way the child was still wolfing sweets after an incredible quantity of more substantial viands.

So Larry was let go, and he fairly flew down the path and along the road toward the railroad station.

"What about it?" asked Betty, as no one seemed inclined to take up the subject.

"Well," said Pete, "if you ask me, or, even if you don't ask me, I think it's a fake, the whole thing."

"Why?"

"Oh I don't know, but it's fishy, that child coming over from Haverstraw, and all that."

"I'm not sure I agree with your views, Pete," Rodney said, "but we don't have to decide this thing. Fleming Stone is coming in a few hours, and we can put the matter in his hands for advice."

"I shall do no such thing," Aunt Judy astounded them by remarking. "You seem to forget the letter is addressed to me. You seem to forget that I am forbidden to tell the police about it, or to try any gullery—I think that was the word—but I am to be at the Miller house at midnight with the money if I want Emily back. I do want Emily back, and I shall be there with the money exactly in accordance with the stipulations. If nobody interferes no harm will come to me, and it may mean the restoration of my girl. At any rate, it is a chance I shall not miss."

"But, Aunt Judy——"

"Don't 'But Aunt Judy,' me, Rod. It won't do one speck of good. I shall follow directions implicitly. I am not afraid, I'm only afraid not to do it. Of course it isn't a fake. Where would be the sense of sending a boy over from Haverstraw to hoax us? And who would hoax us, anyway, and why? I mean, none of our acquaintances would do it, and none of the working people in Hilldale have any spite or grudge against us. I can't see any reason or motive for a hoax. The child was kidnaped for money. I've felt sure of that all along. Now we have evidence of it, and we are told how to get her back. I've seen or heard of these cases before, and invariably the restoration is balked because the principals are unwilling to give up the money without apprehending the villians. You all know that. The police are dragged in, and they think they can cleverly hoodwink the abductors and get back the victim and save the money, too. They can't."

"Good gracious, Aunt Judy, you seem to know what you're talking about," exclaimed Pete, who had the highest admiration for the intrepid old lady.

"I always know what I'm talking about, but not everybody believes it, as you do," and Aunt Judy gave him one of her sweetest smiles.

She was an irresistibly pretty woman, not as old as her white hair made her seem, and her complexion, even when aided by various beautifiers, was as soft and fair as a girl's.

"Well, I wash my hands of it," Rodney said, decidedly. "I'm for having that note turned over to Fleming Stone as soon as he arrives. But it is, after all, Aunt Judy's property, and we cannot presume to advise her. But think it over well, dear, before you go out there tonight without Stone's knowledge. Why don't you just reserve decision until he gets here, and then seen how you are impressed by his manner and attitude, and conclude then what you will do?"

"Now, that's downright bright of you, Rod," and Aunt Judy nodded her curls in entire agreement with his suggestion. "I'll do that very thing. And, children," she added, "I think we won't have supper till Mr. Stone gets here, late though it may be. It'll give him a nice send-off to have supper first thing."

Sunday-night supper was a highly honored institution of Hilldale. To be invited to it was a sign of intimacy or honor, or both.

And the suppers at Knollwood were renowned, not only because of their superior food and drink, but because there one might meet celebrities or even more interesting people unavailable in other houses.

Guests rarely dropped in for Sunday night supper. It was an unwritten law that an invitation was more or less necessary, though, of course, many had standing invitations.

Abel Collins was among these, and he came over soon after dusk.

He was always a welcome guest everywhere, and was often chided that he favored Knollwood above other houses, usually followed up by a jesting reference to the attractions of the charming Mrs. Bell.

Of course, no word was said to Abel of the letter so strangely received, for that was Aunt Judy's property and she had the matter in charge.

But though Aunt Judy was of no mind to discuss the letter with the young people, who, however dear they were, seemed to her a lot of children, she did want the advice of an older head, and as Abel came early, she concluded to lay it before him.

So she carried him off to her little sitting room and closed the door upon them.

"Well, Juliana," Collins said, "Lord knows I'm sorry for you, and my heart is full of sympathy, but I'm free to confess it ain't mussed you up a mite. You look younger and more bloomin' than ever."

"Don't be silly," said Aunt Judy with fine scorn. "Now, you listen to this, Abel, and put your whole mind on it, for I consider it most important."

She carefuly spread out the letter before him, and adjusting his reading glasses, Abel Collins perused it thoughtfully three times from start to finish.

"It's a fake," he pronounced, as he refolded the paper, and put his glasses back in their case. "Don't you be taken in by it, Judy."

"What do you mean, a fake? Won't there be anybody there tonight to meet me?"

He stared at her.

"For the land's sake! You don't mean you're going out there at midnight?"

"Of course I am. Think a minute. This is the only, the one single hint or chance we've had of finding Emily. Do you think I'll pass it up? No indeed!"

"But, Judy, listen. This isn't a real letter. Real kidnappers don't write like that——"

"Don't talk nonsense, Abel Collins. Anybody'd think you knew something about it. Pray how do real kidnappers write? Is there a school—a college for kidnappers? Or is it a correspondence course and have you taken it?"

"Now, now, Judy, don't lose your temper, or get sarcastic. It won't do a mite of good. I tell you that letter is a fake, because it shows on the surface. Whoever wrote that means either to hoax you utterly, and if you keep that appointment you'll find nobody there, or else, and perhaps this is more likely, there will be somebody there who will blandly accept the money you bring and bid you good-evening. But it will bring Emily not one step nearer to you."

"Why do you think that?"

Judy Bell was always willing to listen to the ideas of people in whose judgment she felt confidence.

"I'm not sure I can tell you. It's just a feeling, a sort of hunch. I guess that the thing is insincere, is a fraud of one sort of another. Are you positively going out there at midnight?"

"I want to. The children frown on it, and Rod, of course, wants me to lay it before Mr. Stone. But I'm afraid he won't let me go."

"He can't stop you, if you insist. Go, if you like. I'm sure no personal harm will come to you, nor any good. It will certainly not mean the return of Emily. If you want my advice, which of course you don't, I say, ask Mr. Stone what to do."

"I do want your advice, Abel, and I will put it up to Mr. Stone."

Shortly after eight o'clock Fleming Stone arrived. His train was late, and so the Knollwood car had waited at the station and brought him up to the house.

Sayre greeted him, and made general introductions.

Stone was a magnetic man, and they all took to him. He was middle-aged, perhaps fifty or so, and his strong, rather patrician features gave him a look of wisdom and authority.

Abel Collins looked at him keenly, to learn if this was real wisdom or a sort of mask that every detective ought to wear, and his conclusion was that Mr. Stone was the goods all right. Than which, Abel knew no higher compliment.

PULPWOOD ON FARMS

If farmers are not to raise wheat, what shall they raise instead? Many suggestions have been given. The newest is pulpwood.

Ordinarily this wouldn't interest the farmer, who is accustomed to annual crops and wants action. It takes a long time, he thinks, to plant an apple tree and wait for the apples. It takes much longer to get results from forest trees, no matter for what use. Yet here is something that might appeal to many.

Professor McKee of Columbia University has developed a popular tree which he grows to a diameter of eight inches in eight years. Poplar makes good paper pulp. Poplar is easy to grow—too easy, in fact, for many city people, who regard it as a pest. An eight-inch tree is big enough for pulp. Any tree that will grow an inch in diameter a year is not to be despised.

In the country such trees would make no trouble while growing, require no care. Pulp wood is more and more in demand, as our available supplies in the States and Canada are depleted. Why not do a little pioneering in this field?

The "Four Hundred" is a phrase coined in the gay nineties which referred to the relatively small number of New York society people who were deemed eligible to be guests of prominent hostesses. The phrase has become a figure of speech.

Junks Fit Canals

A boat much larger than the stream in which it floats is a very common sight in certain parts of China. Junks navigate with ease these ribbon-like interior canals. These boats, whose superstructure is strikingly large, often hang over the banks of the canals through which they pass. The bottom of the craft is small enough to "fit into" the stream.

Medical Science Realizes Value of Transfusions

—and Not Only in "Desperate Cases"

SAYS DR. COPELAND

This Method Is Being Used Today in Treating Diseases Like Pernicious Anemia, Infections, and in Fact Any Condition Accompanying Blood Deteriation.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

EVERY other group of workers has its organization. Why should we not have an organization for the protection of blood donors?

In New York City every year there are about eleven thousand transfusions, averaging about one pint of blood in each case. About two years ago the blood givers organized the "Co-operative Blood Donor Agency," in connection with New York Hospital. Later the "Blood Transfusion Betterment Association," was formed. The latter organization maintains offices where candidates are examined and selected, and where monthly re-examinations are held.

Women are not accepted. This is because their veins are too small and, as a rule, they do not stand the loss of blood as readily as men. Donors are chosen, not alone with reference to their physical health and the condition of the veins at the elbow, but also for their appearance and good character.

References to this form of treatment are found in the writings of ancient Egyptians and Romans. It is known that in 1492 the Pope received blood from three donors.

For many years blood transfusions have not been uncommon. Since the World War, however, they have become an important factor in medical treatment.

This story may not mean much to most of you. But there are many cases where this procedure is essential to the life of the patient. There are times when he must have supplied immediately a quantity of good rich blood.

Of course you know the term "blood transfusion" means the transfer of blood from the circulation of one living person into that of another. Transfusions are given to replace the blood lost by hemorrhage after an accident or operation, or by hemorrhage in cases of internal ulcer.

This treatment is indicated too, in diseases like pernicious anemia, and other conditions accompanying deterioration of the blood. In many infections, it may be helpful. It is given in cases of illuminating gas poisoning.

Transfusions are given sometimes to increase the resistance before a serious operation. The fresh, health-giving blood promotes the prospect of recovery.

Science has progressed in its study of this subject so that there attends the transfusion very little or no danger. The physician makes sure before giving the treatment that he is using blood compatible with that of his patient. He exercises care that too great a quantity of blood is not given. By proper technique, he prevents the passage of a bubble of air or a blood clot into the body of his patient.

You can see that while it is unusual, it is a method of treatment that has great importance in a desperate case.

10 YEARS AGO

Charles D. Crawford, son of Mrs. Louise Crawford, N. Scioto-st, fell from a window at the home of Germain Joseph Tuesday and broke a bone in his left arm at the wrist.

Mrs. Caroline Ward, aged 69, died at her home in Walnut-twp yesterday of paralysis.

Shifting Man

David's mother gave a man soliciting work a task for the day. After a weary time trying to keep the laborer on the job she called him a shiftless man. A few days later a stranger called and the five-year-old lad said: "If you are a shifting man, mother'll not give you a job."

America Claims Grapefruit

Grapefruit is an American fruit, according to the United States Department of Agriculture, which states that the United States produces about 96 per cent of the world supply. The most important competitor, the Isle of Pines, a Cuban territory, produces but 2 per cent of the world crop.

Quebec's Name in Dispute

The origin of Quebec's name is interesting. Some claim that it is a corruption of "Quel Bec" (What a beak!) an ejaculation emitted supposely by some of the followers of Jacques Cartier as they first set eyes on Cape Diamond; others claim that it comes from "Kepeck," meaning "disembark," the greetings tendered by the natives to the new French arrivals.

Yum! Yum!

Theatres

AT THE GRAND

A mystery thriller, all-talking and with an excellent cast, is appearing at the Grand theatre Monday and Tuesday. "The Seven Keys to Baldpate" is the title of the show and Richard Dix plays the leading role.

Margaret Livingston plays opposite Dix and handles her part excellently.

AT THE CLIFTONA

Something new in scenes of backstage life is promised in "Puttin' on the Ritz," the United Artists' all-dialog musical extravaganza starring Harry Richman, which begins its local showing at the Cliftona theatre Sunday.

This production contains not only the conventional glimpses of rehearsals and dressing rooms. It goes deeply into the lives of that interesting and curious band of folk — the professionals — shows them as human beings. It depicts them in poverty and riches, leads the audience to the little nooks and crannies of boarding houses and theatrical hotels which they call home, and makes them real personalities.

An actor without money is a particularly pathetic figure, says Richman, and he is made more so by the boastful conversation and jauntiness of manner with which he attempts to carry it off.

As a vaudeville team with many ups and considerably more downs, Richman, Joan Bennett, James Gleason and Lilyan Tashman offer some remarkable chacterizations, with a great deal of comedy and many serious scenes.

"Puttin' on the Ritz" offers to the public several songs written especially for the picture by Irving Berlin and sung by the golden-voiced Richman.

AT THE METROPOLITAN

A tip-top cast with a number of featured players, a story that is thoroughly absorbing every moment of the time, novel plot complications and genuine comedy make the new James Cruze production, "Cock o' the Walk," which opened yesterday at the Cliftona theatre, one of the finest talkies to be presented here in some time. Joseph Schildkraut, the star, is cast as a Latin lover, and if he doesn't make thousands of feminine hearts flutter in some of his swell love scenes, well, we lose our bet. And Myrna Loy, who plays one of the girls who attract Schildkraut's amorous attentions, is sweet and charming with her own unusual beauty. This team plays capitally together, and their acting alone makes the picture distinctive.

In "Cock o' the Walk" Schildkraut plays the part of a bland, handsome Argentine sportsman. Many women love him, and he toys with them all. His days are filled with intrigues, and he manages to get himself feared and hated by most of the married men in town. His success as a lover, however, does not prevent his plans for a brilliant carreer as a violinist. To further these plans he goes to unusual measures to insure his financial independence. He obtains the help of Narita, the despondent beauty whom he pretends to ignore.

PORCUPINES

We know a family that has a cabin in the north woods. They have a porcupine—or the porcupine has them, they're not quite sure which. He gnaws at anything handy, can be driven temporarily by a flashlight, but returns, always undaunted, to gnaw some more.

Of late he has evinced fondness for a certain brand of soap warranted to preserve the schoolgirl complexion. He will eat ivory or castile, he will even eat naphtha soap if nothing better offers, but he prefers the sweet smelling green when he has a choice.

The cabin is not very large. Ablutions are performed at a bench outside the house which holds a pail, dipper and basin. Towels hang on nails, and a starch-box nailed to the wall holds the soap and toothpaste. Porky has not yet learned how to open the toothpaste tubes, but when he does, the family will probably have to build on a lean-to for washing, and civilization will have wormed its way in.

The porcupine is protected in Ontario, and anyhow, why should they harm him? He was there first and doubtless regards the family as interlopers. He's an entertaining cuss, waddling off in the glare of a flashlight with all his quills standing out like an aura in the glow.

But when he gnaws the washboard or the handle of a tub he makes a good deal of noise. Has anyone any advice to offer on the subject of soap-eating porcupines?

POLITICS BY RADIO

Detroit is having a merry time with its radio politics. Robert Oakman denounces in good, round, old-fashioned terms the "betrayal of the public trust" of which he says Mayor Charles Bowles is guilty. Oakman spent several thousands of dollars, it is said, to help along Bowles' campaign last fall, because he thought he would make a good mayor. Believing Bowles unfaithful to what was expected of him, Oakman now spends more thousands trying to undo his past mistake.

Bowles, on the other hand, declares that he's saved the city thousands of dollars, and defends his policy. It's a whopping row.

The radio is giving people a chance at the personal appeal of the old-time campaigns. Words on paper are never quite the same as the voice resounding in the ears.

Radio listeners get a chance to know that Herbert Hoover says "govermunt" and Cal Coolidge talks through his nose. But if the idols prove themselves to have feet of clay, they at least prove themselves human and deserving of the best human judgment as their merits and their capabilities for public service.

Maybe what the public has been needing in these last apathetic years is a good old hullabaloo that stirs 'em all up and gets everybody to using his bean.

BEATING DEPRESSIONS

It's a great year for some folks. The "tobacco trust" reports the most prosperous year in its history. It's at the top notch right now, in midsummer.

Maybe this is on account of the vacation season. People on vacation always smoke more. It might be attributed, too, to unemployment. Forced idleness makes tobacco an essential. People have to indulge in small luxuries to make poverty endurable.

One of the big tobacco men, though, says it's newspaper advertising that does it. They put over cigarettes in a big way, and now seems to be doing the same thing for cigars, which were [illegible] for a while.

If that's the real reason—and it must be a big factor—it might serve as a fruitful suggestion to some other lines of business.

PUNISHMENT

It is rather startling to hear Newton D. Baker, former secretary of war, a leading member of the American bar and a member of the President's crime commission, suggesting that criminal terms be reduced 80 percent. Referring to penal conditions in his own state he says:

"Instead of sending someone to the penitentiary for 10 years you sent him for two years for the same offense, but when he was sent for two years he stayed the two years. It would be far better than to send him for 10 and let him out at the end of [illegible] or even two years."

The principle that he is trying to drive home is sound. All experience seems to prove that lighter punishments which are certain are more effective in preventing crime than heavy punishments which are uncertain.

LIFE'S LIKE THAT

"WHERE'S EMILY?"

by CAROLYN WELLS

CHAPTER XXXIV.

"HOW do you know he had black hair?" demanded Pete, "didn't he have his hat on?"

"He told me so," said Larry, his mouth full of cake.

"Told you he had black hair?"

"Naw, I don't mean that, I mean he told me to bring the note here."

"Your supper has gone to your head," said Pete, laughing at the way the child was still wolfing sweets after an incredible quantity of more substantial viands.

So Larry was let go, and he fairly flew down the path and along the road toward the railroad station.

"What about it?" asked Betty, as no one seemed inclined to take up the subject.

"Well," said Pete, "if you ask me, or, even if you don't ask me, I think it's a fake, the whole thing."

"Why?"

"Oh I don't know, but it's fishy, that child coming over from Haverstraw, and all that."

"I'm not sure I agree with your views, Pete," Rodney said, "but we don't have to decide this thing. Fleming Stone is coming in a few hours, and we can put the matter in his hands for advice."

"I shall do no such thing," Aunt Judy astounded them by remarking. "You seem to forget the letter is addressed to me. You seem to forget that I am forbidden to tell the police about it, or to try any gullery—I think that was the word—but I am to be at the Miller house at midnight with the money if I want Emily back. I do want Emily back, and I shall be there with the money exactly in accordance with the stipulations. If nobody interferes no harm will come to me, and it may mean the restoration of my girl. At any rate, it is a chance I shall not miss."

"But, Aunt Judy——"

"Don't 'But Aunt Judy,' me, Rod. It won't do one speck of good. I shall follow directions implicitly. I am not afraid, I'm only afraid not to do it. Of course it isn't a fake. Where would be the sense of sending a boy over from Haverstraw to hoax us? And who would hoax us, anyway, and why? I mean none of our acquaintances would do it, and none of the [illegible] people in Hilldale [illegible] or grudge against [illegible] any reason or motive [illegible]. The child was kidnapped for money. I've felt sure of that all along. Now we have evidence [illegible] and we are told how [illegible] I've seen or heard [illegible] before, and in [illegible] restoration is balked [illegible] principals are unwilling to give up the money without [illegible] You all [illegible] police are dragged [illegible] they can discover [illegible] and get [illegible] money [illegible]"

[illegible] Aunt Judy, [illegible] what you're [illegible] Pete, [illegible] admiration [illegible]

[illegible] know what I'm talking about [illegible] not everybody believes it, as you do," and Aunt Judy gave him one of her sweetest smiles.

She was an irresistibly pretty woman, not as old as her white hair made her seem, and her complexion, even when aided by various beautifiers, was as soft and fair as a girl's.

"Well, I wash my hands of it," Rodney said, decidedly. "I'm for having that note turned over to Fleming Stone as soon as he arrives. But it is, after all, Aunt Judy's property, and we cannot presume to advise her. But think it over well, dear, before you go out there tonight without Stone's knowledge. Why don't you just reserve decision until he gets here, and then seen how you are impressed by his manner and attitude, and conclude then what you will do?"

"Now, that's downright bright of you, Rod," and Aunt Judy nodded her curls in entire agreement with his suggestion. "I'll do that very thing. And, children," she added, "I think we won't have supper till Mr. Stone gets here, late though it may be. It'll give him a nice send-off to have supper first thing."

Sunday-night supper was a highly honored institution of Hilldale. To be invited to it was a sign of intimacy or honor, or both.

And the suppers at Knollwood were renowned, not only because of their superior food and drink, but because there one might meet celebrities or even more interesting people unavailable in other houses.

Guests rarely dropped in for Sunday night supper. It was an unwritten law that an invitation was more or less necessary, though, of course, many had standing invitations.

Abel Collins was among these, and he came over soon after dusk.

He was always a welcome guest everywhere, and was often chided that he favored Knollwood above other houses, usually followed up by a jesting reference to the attractions of the charming Mrs. Bell.

Of course, no word was said to Abel of the letter so strangely received, for that was Aunt Judy's property and she had the matter in charge.

But though Aunt Judy was of no mind to discuss the letter with the young people, who, however dear they were, seemed to her a lot of children, she did want the advice of an older head, and as Abel came early, she concluded to lay it before him.

So she carried him off to her little sitting room and closed the door upon them.

"Well, Juliana," Collins said, "Lord knows I'm sorry for you, and my heart is full of sympathy, but I'm free to confess it ain't mussed you up a mite. You look younger and more bloomin' than ever."

"Don't be silly," said Aunt Judy with fine scorn. "Now, you listen to this, Abel, and put your whole mind on it, for I consider it most important."

She carefuly spread out the letter before him, and adjusting his reading glasses, Abel Collins perused it thoughtfully three times from start to finish.

"It's a fake," he pronounced, as he refolded the paper, and put his glasses back in their case. "Don't you be taken in by it, Judy."

"What do you mean, a fake? Won't there be anybody there tonight to meet me?"

He stared at her.

"For the land's sake! You don't mean you're going out there at midnight?"

"Of course I am. Think a minute. This is the only, the one single hint or chance we've had of finding Emily. Do you think I'll pass it up? No indeed!"

"But, Judy, listen. This isn't a real letter. Real kidnappers don't write like that——"

"Don't talk nonsense, Abel Collins. Anybody'd think you knew something about it. Pray how do real kidnappers write? Is there a school—a college for kidnappers? Or is it a correspondence course, and have you taken it?"

"Now, now, Judy, don't lose your temper, or get sarcastic. It won't do a mite of good. I tell you that letter is a fake, because it shows on the surface. Whoever wrote that means either to hoax you utterly, and if you keep that appointment you'll find nobody there, or else, and perhaps this is more likely, there will be somebody there who will blandly accept the money you bring and bid you good-evening. But it will bring Emily not one step nearer to you."

"Why do you think that?"

Judy Bell was always willing to listen to the ideas of people in whose judgment she felt confidence.

"I'm not sure I can tell you. It's just a feeling, a sort of hunch. I guess that the thing is insincere, is a fraud of one sort of another. Are you positively going out there at midnight?"

"I want to. The children frown on it, and Rod, of course, wants me to lay it before Mr. Stone. But I'm afraid he won't let me go."

"He can't stop you, if you insist. Go, if you like. I'm sure no personal harm will come to you, nor any good. It will certainly not mean the return of Emily. If you want my advice, which of course you don't, I say, ask Mr. Stone what to do."

"I do want your advice, Abel, and I will put it up to Mr. Stone."

Shortly after eight o'clock Fleming Stone arrived. His train was late, and so the Knollwood car had waited at the station and brought him up to the house.

Sayre greeted him, and made general introductions.

Stone was a magnetic man, and they all took to him. He was middle-aged, perhaps fifty or so, and his strong, rather patrician features gave him a look of wisdom and authority.

Abel Collins looked at him keenly, to learn if this was real wisdom or a sort of mask that every detective ought to wear, and his conclusion was that Mr. Stone was the goods all right. Than which, Abel knew no higher compliment.

PULPWOOD ON FARMS

[illegible] to raise [illegible] questions have [illegible]

[illegible] to plant an apple tree and wait for the apples. It takes much longer to get results from forest trees, no matter for what use. Yet here is something that might appeal to many.

Professor McKee of Columbia University has developed a popular tree which he grows to a diameter of eight inches in eight years. Poplar makes good paper pulp. Poplar is easy to grow, too easy, in fact, for many city people, who regard it as a pest. An eight-inch tree is big enough for pulp. Any tree that will grow an inch in diameter a year is not to be despised.

In the country such trees would make no trouble while growing, require no care. Pulp wood is more and more in demand, as our available supplies in the States and Canada are depleted. Why not do a little pioneering in this field?

A boat much larger than the stream in which it floats is a very common sight in certain parts of China. Junks navigate with ease these ribbon-like interior canals. Medical Science Realizes Value of Transfusions

—and Not Only in "Desperate Cases"

SAYS DR. COPELAND

This Method Is Being Used Today in Treating Diseases Like Pernicious Anemia, Infections, and in Fact Any Condition Accompanying Blood Deteriation.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

EVERY other group of workers has its organization. Why should we not have an organization for the protection of blood donors?

In New York City every year there are about eleven thousand transfusions, averaging about one pint of blood in each case. About two years ago the blood givers organized the "Co-operative Blood Donor Agency," in connection with New York Hospital. Later the "Blood Transfusion Betterment Association," was formed. The latter organization maintains offices where candidates are examined and selected, and where monthly re-examinations are held.

Women are not accepted. This is because their veins are too small and, as a rule, they do not stand the loss of blood as readily as men. Donors are chosen, not alone with reference to their physical health and the condition of the veins at the elbow, but also for their appearance and good character.

References to this form of treatment are found in the writings of ancient Egyptians and Romans. It is known that in 1492 the Pope received blood from three donors.

For many years blood transfusions have not been uncommon. Since the World War, however, they have become an important factor in medical treatment.

This story may not mean much to most of you. But there are many cases where this procedure is essential to the life of the patient. There are times when he must have supplied immediately a quantity of good rich blood.

Of course you know the term "blood transfusion" means the transfer of blood from the circulation of one living person into that of another. Transfusions are given to replace the blood lost by hemorrhage after an accident or operation, or by hemorrhage in cases of internal ulcer.

This treatment is indicated too, in diseases like pernicious anemia, and other conditions accompanying deterioration of the blood. In many infections, it may be helpful. It is given in cases of illuminating gas poisoning.

Transfusions are given sometimes to increase the resistance before a serious operation. The fresh, health giving blood promotes the prospect of recovery.

Science has progressed in its study of this subject so that there attends the transfusion very little or no danger. The physician makes sure before giving the treatment that he is using blood compatible with that of his patient. He exercises care that too great a quantity of blood is not given. By proper technique, he prevents the passage of a bubble of air or a blood clot into the body of his patient.

You can see that while it is unusual, it is a method of treatment that has great importance in a desperate case.

Shifting Man

David's mother gave a man soliciting work a task for the day. After a weary time trying to keep the laborer on the job she called him a shiftless man. A few days later a stranger called and the five-year-old lad said: "If you are a shifting man, mother'll not give you a job."

America Claims Grapefruit

Grapefruit is an American fruit, according to the United States Department of Agriculture, which states that the United States produces about 96 per cent of the world supply. The most important competitor, the Isle of Pines, a Cuban territory, produces but 2 per cent of the world crop.

Quebec's Name in Dispute

The origin of Quebec's name is interesting. Some claim that it is a corruption of "Quel Bec" (What a beak!) an ejaculation emitted supposely by some of the followers of Jacques Cartier as they first set eyes on Cape Diamond; others claim that it comes from "Kepeck," meaning "disembark," the greetings tendered by the natives to the new French arrivals.

Yum! Yum!

Hospital patients of long tenancy can appreciate the words of a former convict. In a current article, he was asked by an interviewer what made him long mostly for freedom and he replied, "I was working in the warden's garden and through the window there drifted the odor of ham and eggs."

District's Claims Allowed

The District of Columbia was not originally considered in the appointment of Rhodes scholarships. After years of consideration it was ruled that the district be treated as part of Maryland, and the first election under this arrangement was held in December, 1924.

Maidenhair Tree Exhibited

The ginko, or maidenhair tree, of Japan, the only modern survivor of a tree family of which ten fossil species are known, is represented by an exhibit in the hall of plant life at the Field Museum of Natural History, Chicago, which includes a branch in full flower, seeds, fruits and wood.

Theatres

AT THE GRAND

A mystery thriller, all-talking and with an excellent cast, is appearing at the Grand theatre Monday and Tuesday. "The Seven Keys to Baldpate" is the title of the show and Richard Dix plays the leading role.

Margaret Livingston plays opposite Dix and handles her part excellently.

AT THE CLIFTONA

Something new in scenes of backstage life is promised in "Puttin' on the Ritz," the United Artists' all-dialog musical extravaganza starring Harry Richman, which begins its local showing at the Cliftona theatre Sunday.

This production contains not only the conventional glimpses of rehearsals and dressing rooms. It goes deeply into the lives of that interesting and curious band of folk — the professionals — shows them as human beings. It depicts them in poverty and riches, leads the audience to the little nooks and crannies of boarding houses and theatrical hotels which they call home, and makes them real personalities.

An actor without money is a particularly pathetic figure, says Richman, and he is made more so by the boastful conversation and jauntiness of manner with which he attempts to carry it off.

As a vaudeville team with many ups and considerably more downs, Richman, Joan Bennett, James Gleason and Lilyan Tashman offer some remarkable chacterizations, with a great deal of comedy and many serious scenes.

"Puttin' on the Ritz" offers to the public several songs written especially for the picture by Irving Berlin and sung by the golden-voiced Richman.

AT THE METROPOLITAN

A tip-top cast with a number of featured players, a story that is thoroughly absorbing every moment of the time, novel plot complications, and genuine comedy make the new James Cruze production, "Cock o' the Walk," which opened yesterday at the Cliftona theatre, one of the finest talkies to be presented here in some time. Joseph Schildkraut, the star, is cast as a Latin lover, and if he doesn't make thousands of feminine hearts flutter in some of his swell love scenes, well, we lose our bet. And Myrna Loy, who plays one of the girls who attract Schildkraut's amorous attentions, is sweet and charming with her own unusual beauty. This team plays capitally together, and their acting alone makes the picture distinctive.

In "Cock o' the Walk" Schildkraut plays the part of a bland, handsome Argentine sportsman. Many women love him, and he toys with them all. His days are filled with intrigues, and he manages to get himself feared and hated by most of the married men in town. His success as a lover, however, does not prevent his plans for a brilliant carreer as a violinist. To further these plans he goes to unusual measures to insure his financial independence. He obtains the help of Narita, the despondent beauty whom he pretends to ignore.

SELECTS WIN FROM FOX 9

Greeno on Mound For Winner In Game Which Ends 18-14 Played at Fox.

The Circleville Selects claimed their first victory over Fox Postoffice Sunday by the score of 18 to 14, at Fox Post office.

The Selects started off in fine style by collecting four runs. Three men were on base and Bucky Hutchinson pounded out a three sacker and then succeeded in scoring himself.

The Fox men came back in the first to score two runs but that was as far as they got for quite a period of time.

BROOKLYN AND CHICAGO STILL FIGHT FOR TOP

Both Drop Games Over Week-End—Eddie Morgan's Home Run Defeats Yankees

NEW YORK, July 21.—One of the irritating things about being ahead of anything, whether its the bill collector or merely an opponent in ping-pong, is the necessity of staying that way and for that reason the Brooklyn Robins were all out of sorts today.

In fact only a neighborly gesture by the New York Giants kept the flock at the front in the National League grind, the men of Manhattan bumping off the heat-dazed Cubs while the Robins fluttered into a tailspin before the St. Louis Cardinals. Brooklyn and St. Louis meet this afternoon in a double header and a twin win for the faltering Robins would be as welcome as a rain.

William Watson Clark, who last time out pitched a one hit beauty, went to the porcelains in the second inning and Moss and Thurston who succeeded him were just as bad, so the pressing Cardinals gathered it in, 15 to 6. Watkins and Frisch got homers for the winners.

Hack Wilson hit his 23rd homer which was important only up to the time Leach, Lindstrom, Terry and Ott got going. Bush and a chorus of other Chicago hurlers were not clicking and the Giants won, 13 to 5.

Lou Gehrig pounded his 26th and 27th homers and Babe Ruth his 34th, but Eddie Morgan's home run for Cleveland in the ninth with one on was the blow that counted most, winning for the Indians 9 to 8.

Lefty Grove engraved his 13th victory, lowering Detroit, 5 to 3. Jimmy Foxx helped him a lot with a four-sacker with one on base.

The Senators at last may be off on that long-heralded slide. They fell 8 to 6 before the St. Louis Brownies. Joe Judge batted for Al Crowder, Washington hurler, in the ninth and got a homer.

Circuiters by Meusel, Heilmann and Gooch won for the Reds in the opener with the Braves 8 to 5 but Wally Berger's single and two triples and some fancy pitching by old man Zachary accounted the tea tilter to Boston, 13 to 1.

Boston bit deeper of bedrock as the White Sox took a twin bill. Ted Lyons registered his 14th win of the year 16 to 4 in the starter and McKain got credit for the second triumph, 5 to 4, Caraway embracing the showers in the seventh.

Game at Utilities Has Bearing on Leadership of Recreation Loop.

Tonight's recreation ball games promises to be the best of the season, and will help end up the first part of the second half.

At the Utilities, Doggy Ward's and the Coca Colas will play. This game promises to be plenty hot.

Doggy and his gang now head the rec ball standings by a nice margin, and a loss might prove fatal, so they will play their best.

Although the C. C. of A. are away down in the cellar, they may snap out of the rut and defeat the Gordon Tires this evening at Mason's. The tire men have suffered two defeats in this round.

Both games will start promptly at 6:30 p. m.

WIN STREAK OF SENATOR 9 STILL ON

Come From Behind In Both Ends of Double Bill With Indianapolis.

COLUMBUS, O., July 21.—The Columbus Senators were hot yesterday. The temperature stretched to 112 degrees, unofficially the hottest spot in the United States. Incidentally, the Solons became heat crazed and came from behind in both ends of a doubleheader with Indianapolis, to run its winning streak to five straight.

The opener went to Columbus, when it tied the count in the last of the ninth inning and then went on to take the game in the 12th inning by a 7-to-6 count.

Indianapolis started the nightcap with a bang and had a commanding lead. But the Senators worked up a sweat in the last four innings and ran the bases wild, and gained a moral victory when they tied the count again in the ninth inning. The game then was called because of darkness, with both teams deadlocked at 7 apiece.

Louisville added a link in its hold on first place when it downed Toledo, 9 to 1, while St. Paul was dropping its contest with Minneapolis.

Ganzel led the Colonels' attack by having a perfect day at bat. In his four appearances at the plate, he connected for two doubles and a pair of singles.

Minneapolis took the final game of the series from St. Paul, and made it hurt as the Saints slipped down a game in their effort to overhaul Louisville.

Nick Cullop, Minneapolis, chalked up his 13th home run of the season. His team mate, Griffith, delivered the blow that hurt the Saints, when his homer in the eighth broke a 9-all deadlock.

A real ball game was played between Kansas City and Milwaukee. The opposing pitchers went the full route and then some. The pitching duel lasted 2 hours and 15 minutes and was won with baseball strategy by a sacrifice fly in the 11th inning, which scored the winning tally and gave Milwaukee a 5-to-4 victory.

The Blues garnered 8 hits, while the Brewers scraped up 7. Riconda, of the show-me-lads went hitless after having connected safely in 29 consecutive games.

SELECTS WIN FROM FOX 9

Greene on Mound For Winner In Game Which Ends 18-14 Played at Fox.

The Circleville Selects claimed their first victory over Fox Postoffice Sunday by the score of 18 to 14, at Fox Post office.

The Selects started off in fine style by collecting four runs. Three men were on base and Bucky Hutchinson pounded out a three sacker and then succeeded in scoring himself.

The Fox men came back in the first to score two runs but that was as far as they got for quite a period of time.
